

Market Research Analyst - Wind Energy Systems Internship: Summer 2010

Deerpath Energy develops community-scale renewable energy projects that have an immediate, tangible impact on the local environment. Using a new generation of small wind turbines – called micro-wind – we work with communities to distribute numerous micro-wind turbines across existing infrastructure in a manner that harvests the maximum amount of wind energy while maintaining harmony with the local community environment. Deerpath provides a comprehensive service offering that includes project development, siting, installation, system operations and maintenance, and innovative project finance through long-term power purchase agreements.

Our growth has created an exciting opportunity for an experienced analyst with a strong interest in green power to participate in projects designed to provide lighting and feed the local grid with renewable power.

Responsibilities:

- Work with multi-disciplinary teams to develop green energy projects
- Conduct feasibility studies, cost/benefit analyses, and financial analyses
- Perform market research
- Track regulatory issues and identify environmental regulations
- Participate in proposal development
- Write reports documenting project performance
- Represent Deerpath to clients
- Work in team-oriented start-up environment

Requirements:

- M.S./M.B.A. candidate with experience in fields related to energy and the environment.
- Proficiency in use of database, spreadsheet, word processing, and presentation applications, GIS experience a plus.
- Excellent organizational skills

Deerpath Energy is an exciting, young company, led by a team of energy industry veterans and experienced professionals with a passion for environmental sustainability and business innovation. Our offices overlook Marblehead harbor.
